COUNT THE COST.

In urging that the United States send its armies into Mexico, blockade the ports and otherwise by arms and battle seek to restore peace therein, we humbly suppose that certain excited newspapers are not distinctly aware of what it is that they are urging the administration at Washington to undertake.

Certain eastern newspapers have recently made an estimate that a war with Mexico and the resulting occupation, which might be protracted, would cost 100,000 lives and perhaps a billion or two of dollars. And the peacefully inclined papers are asking their belligerent contemporaries whether it is worth while to sacrifice the lives of a hundred thousand Americans in the hope of bettering the condition of the few who are in jeopardy as a result of their preferring to remain in Mexico under the present conditions.

This great nation, we may remind the shouters for war, is not afraid to fight, nor is it afraid of any nation. This was clear enough when it recently notified all the great nations of Europe to keep their hands off Mexico, and when it quickly caused the greatest of them to retract an error into which an ambassador had led it by recognizing the present dictator there. Fortunately for ourselves and for the world, and most of all for Mexico, this government cannot be goaded from its duty to the unfortunate country south of us by the insults of red-handed usurpers or by the sneers of a partisan press, the latter prompted, it may be, by private interests and illegitimate concession in the badly exploited country to the south of us.

Governor West, the militant executive of Oregon, offers to call out the militia of that state to suppress the buffets conducted by the Elks and Moose in their clubrooms at Salem, the capital city. This will give Salem some advertising. If the governor is willing to take a quiet tip he will leave well enough alone and not butt in.

Even distant Kansas City was not safe from the ravages of the Los Angeles real estate shark. In an indictment of directors of the Night and Day bank of the Missouri city appears the names of a Los Angeles bunch who victimized 3000 trusting Missourians.

It may take some force to hold the visitors down this evening. That is why Tonopah broke in the chief of police to the mysteries of the order of Elks at the last session. He is big and husky and what he will not do to the arrivals remains to be shown.

Watch the men of sorrowful mien. They are nerving themselves for the ragging at the Elks this evening. They have an inkling of what is coming. Tomorrow they will feel 1000 per cent better.

Tonopah goes Goldfield a few better in this initiation of the B. P. O. E. You know what this means—Bully People Of Ely.

After it is all over it is dollars to doughnuts that the Ely candidates will not want to copper their experience in the lodge room.

There's worse to come, and more of it. Motto for the second batch of antlered candidates to remember about midnight.

There will not be any stockings filled by the Elks this year, but there will be tons of coal distributed to the deserving.

Steel armor and insulated rubber boots will be in vogue this evening in a certain building on Main street.

The monotony of the stock market will be forgotten today in the excitement of the initiation of that Ely bunch.

Letters addressed to Santa Claus will be delivered to any charitably inclined persons who will undertake to play the role. Postmaster Stewart will lend a hand.

Maine lobsters are being shipped to California. This does not refer to the tourist crop.

The Ely crowd has a good injection of Missouri blood, as they insist on being shown.

Not one goat, but a whole herd of goats. Where? At the Elks' clubrooms, of course.
